

Table 1. Comparative representation of the classifications of the creation of the world (mundus) in 6 days (Schedel, 1493; Schedel & Alt, 1493, 1496, res.) and the respective areas and spheres (Velho, 1568; Petavius, 1630; De Vallemont, 1707), divided into a (hypothetical) real R and virtual VR realm.

Note:

¹) 'Cælum est id quod omnia, quæ sunt, præter seipsum complectitur', Petavius, (1630, p. 261), the universe is that what all things, except itself containing, are.

²) 'Terra erat i[n]janis [...] inuisibil[e] [et] i[n]co[m]posita [...] abyssum vocat', Schedel (1493, fo. IIR), the earth was void, that is [...] invisible and unjoined [...] called Abyss.

³) 'G[lor]iosus e[n]i[m] de[us]. q[ui] e[st] vera lux. [...]. Mu[n]di fabrica[m] a luce [...] inchoauit', for the glorious God, who is the true light [...] began the creation of the world from the light.

⁴) 'MVndus est compages ex cælo, terrâq; & iis naturis coagmentata quæ vtroque continentur', Petavius, (1630, p. 261), the world is a structure of heaven and earth, connected by the natures contained in both.

⁵) '[...] oriens deo acce[ss]et[ur]. q[uorum] ip[s]e lumi[n]is fons [et] illustrator e[st] re[rum]', the East is attributed to God; the source of light and the illustrator of things.

⁶) 'Æther est tenuissima substantiæ diffusio [...] ac primigenia lux, neque ab altera participata', Petavius, (1630, p. 261), Ether is the thinnest substance diffusion [...] the original light, which is independent.

⁷) 'vnde [et] aues sub firmamento celi ab eo volantes introducuntur', from which birds originate, being introduced by the firmament of the heaven in flight.

⁸) 'EX aquis, que in terra sunt, exhalationes oriri dicuntur', Petavius (1630, p. 261), it is said that vapors arise from the waters contained in the earth.

⁹) 'Et sp[irit]us d[omi]ni ferebat[ur] sup[er] aq[ua]s', Genesis 1:1-2, c.f. Jiménez de Cisneros (1517, fo. ar).

¹¹) 'Aër est Substantia levis, & caliginosa. quæ [...] lumen ex æthere compactum', Petavius (1630, p. 261), Air is the lightweight and misty substance, which [...] condenses luminosity from the Ether.

¹²) 'Si igitur [...] terra: futurum est vt sub conspectum veniat: necesse est aquas que sub celo sunt [...] congregari [...] ', if the earth [...] is to come into sight, [...] the waters which are under the heaven [...] are brought together [...].

¹³) 'Ros est humor purior allapsus ex æthere, ex tenui materia consistens', (1630, p. 261), Dew is pure moisture falling out from the ether, which consists of thin matter.

¹⁴) 'quib[us] ip[s]a sup[er]ior mundi p[ar]s ornat[ur]', with which the upper part of the world itself is adorned.

¹⁶) 'Ornatis sup[er]iorib[us] mu[n]di p[ar]tib[us]', after the upper parts of the world had been decorated.

¹⁷) ' [...] un XII. CIEL, qui est immobile, [...] Pseaume XXXV.', De Vallemont, (1707, p. 54), [...] a XII. HEAVEN, which is immobile [...] Civitas in quadro posita [...] a City built in a square [...] Psalm XXXV.

¹⁸) ' [...] virtutes sunt medius ordo hierarchie secu[n]de, the Virtues form the middle order of the second hierarchy.

²⁰) 'At illa q[ua]e frigoris [et] p[er]petuo gelutoret eiusdem e[st] cu[us] extrem[us] occasus', Schedel (1493, fo. IIV), that which is permanently frozen and numb with cold corresponds to a part of the extreme West.

²¹) 'Ita, vii, Tonos efficit, qua[m] Diapason harmoniam uocant, hoc est uniuersitatem co[n]centus [...]', Plinius Secundus (1250, fo. 22r), ' [...] the seven tones thus producing the so-called diapason, i.e. a universal harmony [...] ' (Rackham, 1967, p. 227).
